

Hanen Parent Training “Target Word”

The Hanen Parent Program, “Target Word” is a family focused approach to expressive language intervention with young children identified as late talkers. The three broad aims of the Hanen Parent Program are:

Education: to help parents gain a better understanding of how children develop language and of the conversational strategies that promote their child’s language development.

Application: to provide opportunities for parents to practice creating language learning opportunities during interaction and conversations with their child.

Support: to give parents opportunities to share ideas, issues, and concerns with other parents who are in similar situations.

This program includes:

- an initial consultation prior to the initial group session
- 5 group sessions led by Hanen trained speech language pathologists
- 2 individual videotaping sessions which include training and feedback with a speech language pathologist
- final consultation with a speech language pathologist
