

Hanen Parent Training “It Takes Two to Talk”

The Hanen Parent Program, “It Takes Two to Talk” is a family focused approach to language intervention with young children. The three broad aims of the Hanen Parent Program are:

Education: to help parents gain a better understanding of how children develop language and of the conversational strategies that promote their child’s language development

Application: to provide opportunities for parents to practice these conversational strategies under the guidance of Hanen trained speech language pathologists

Support: to give parents opportunities to share ideas, issues, and concerns with other parents who are in similar situations

This program includes:

- an initial consultation
- 8 group sessions led by a Hanen trained speech language pathologist
- 3 individual videotaping sessions which include training and feedback with a speech language pathologist
